THOSE LAUGHING EYES.

Those laughing eyes, how roughly
You make them glance about,
And roll them round so carelessly,
I fear you'll drop them out.
And, if you should, the little gems
Would captivate the world,
But useless would they be without
The sockets where they whirled.

Those laughing eyes, they saved you once
A heavy blow at school,
When master Pedagogue, no dunce,
His other rogues to rule,
Had singled out a little miss,
That owned those laughing eyes;
He met them—gave, instead, a hiss,
And bade these "go be wise."

And once, I do remember well,
A dandy came to woo;
Those laughing eyes, all roguish still,
Transfired the creature through;
They made him own his passion deep,
And let him hope an hour,
Then sent the fellow home to weep,
And own their matchless power.

Those laughing eyes, I saw them once—
My heart was full of fear;
I saw them—those roguish eyes
Were swelled with pity's tears.
Oh! then, how beautiful they seem'd!
A lighter charm was given;
And while around they sadly beam'd,
Those eyes were full of heaven.

Those laughing eyes, my little coz,
I fear they'll hurt thee yet,
If thou should'st take it in thy head,
A while to play coquet.
They're given thee for noble ends;
A rich, a glowing prize,
To charm and not to wound thy friends—
Those laughing, roguish eyes.

Those laughing eyes, 'ere now they beam
With witchery's own gleam,
And cast around a radiant gleam,
Like hour's angel smiles.
And if they speak the mind aright,
In glowing words they tell,
That I may revel in their light,
And in thy favor dwell.

Mischief.—It is a curious fact, that there were, comparatively, more wild tricks played in Philadelphia fifty years ago, when the population was so limited, than at present, with our very numerous population. A number of young fellows—one of whom I knew, and who, when he had sowed his wild oats, told me the story—tied a strong cord around a watch-box, while the watchman was in it, and were hauling it to Chesnut street wharf, to let it float down the river, when the cries of the watchman attracting some passengers, caused the roues to flee. At another time, finding a cart loaded with bricks in the street at night, in front of a house that was then in progress of being built, they carried the bricks up three pairs of stairs, and then took the cart apart and carried the pieces up also, put them together there, and then loaded the vehicle with the bricks, much to the astonishment of the brick-layers when they came in the morning. But the most common trick was changing signs and shew-boards, taking them from one extremity of the city to the other, and making the most incongruous arrangement of them; converting tailors into carpenters—bakers into butchers—printers into rag merchants—apothecaries and druggists into venders of rum and tobacco—and doctors into undertakers.

A Hoax.—During the Revolutionary war, there was a certain Major Ryan, who was celebrated—perhaps I might with propriety say notorious—for playing tricks, or hoaxing strangers. Of these I have heard scores, but at present remember but this. He ordered a dinner at the Bowling Green, to be ready on a particular day, about four or five days' distance; giving directions, principally in writing, not only for every dish, but for the order in which they were to be served up; and unless his orders were punctually and literally complied with, no pay was to be required. It was about the time of the adjournment of the Legislature, when there was a great concourse of people passing from Richmond in every direction. On the appointed day, he took his seat in the stage at Richmond, bound for the Bowling Green; and on the road told most miraculous stories of the potency of his olfactory nerves, and asserted that he could smell farther than any man living—even at the distance of a mile, and in a favorable state of wind, a mile and a half. When he came thus near to the Bowling Green, he began to sniff, and recapitulate the various dishes that were provided for dinner—bacon and greens, lamb and salad, round of beef, roast turkey, duck, fowls, cabbage, potatoes, corn, &c., &c. A poor green-horn, who was staring at him with wonder, said he presumed he was only joking, as such extraordinary powers of smell were never bestowed on mortal man. Ryan swore he was in earnest, and offered to wager the dinner and wine for the whole company on the correctness of his smell. The poor fellow accepted the wager, and as soon as they arrived, placed himself, in the passage that led from the kitchen to the dining-room. To his utter dismay, he saw the articles paraded in the order prescribed by Ryan, and began to think that he had fallen into the hands of the devil himself. But he had no remedy. The voice of the company was unanimously against him, and he had a heavy bill to pay. The trick leaked out; and the hoaxer, who, however soft about the head, was athletic and strong about the arms, determined to have a settlement with the hoaxer. He waited until Ryan descended from the stage, when, seizing him by the collar, he took the worth of his money out of his hide; giving him, at the same time, as handsome a pair of black eyes as ever graced any of the pugilistic heroes of Doublybrook fair, together with a gratuitous warning never again to dare to play "tricks upon travellers."

A good retort.—They tell a pleasant story of one of our naval officers, who had the charge of a navy-yard, and who had never signalized himself on the ocean. In walking through the yard, he met a ragged boy with a basket of fragments of wood, which he had picked up; and being angry with the intruder, he gave the boy a kick, and sent it adrift. The boy began to shout, and cried out, "G'd me my basket! G'd me my basket!" The officer gave an order—"Let the brat have his basket." When it was handed to him, he refused to take it, saying, in the midst of his sobbing, "Let him keep it—let him keep it!" 'Tis the first prize he ever took!

Mountain of Salt.—Belzoni found in the northern oases of Egypt, as Hornemann had done before, the tops of the mountains of the desert encrusted with salt, and wells of sweet water rising out of a surface over-spread with masses of it. Herodotus relates the same fact, 2200 years before.

Swedish Roads.—The roads in Sweden are uncommonly beautiful and excellent. The surveyors never allow a stone to be used larger than a walnut. Their roads appear flat—but have a slight convexity.

BOSTON & HINGHAM. SUMMER ARRANGEMENT. Three Trips a Day.

On and after MONDAY, June 2, the steamboat GENERAL INGLETON, Capt. George Beal, will leave Boston, for Hingham, every day, except Sundays, at 9 o'clock, A. M., and Hingham, at 4 and 11 A. M., and 5 o'clock, P. M.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1834.

The Contest.—The great work of perpetuating in the successor of General Jackson the principles of political liberty, won by the toils, the vigils, and the blood of the revolution, remains with the people. It was they who gave the impulsive motion. They will bid it go on. Under their auspices, efforts of faction, whether open or disguised, have always received a timely check. Through peace and war, through all the alternating conflicts of party strife, they have zealously watched the almost imperceptible encroachments of power, and preserved inviolate the sanctity of the Constitution. In taking a view of our present position, or in looking forward to events which a few years will develop, let us also look backward: let us learn in the school of experience. It is refreshing to review the scenes of 1800. It will not be unuseful to compare that period of political history with our own—to consider the simplicity of our machine of government—to trace the absorbent principle of power, and how that principle by a natural connexion of cause and effect, has directly or indirectly, endangered public liberty. The lesson is fraught with instruction. If our population is increased with the growth of the sciences and arts—of civil and social improvement, our political relations are not the more complex. Principles are immutable and eternal. The knowledge of the science of government has been by no means retrograde. The people are well acquainted with their rights, relations and duties. They have intelligence enough to discover, and spirit enough to resist oppression, under whatever garb it may appear. Whether in the disguise of patriotism, or in the splendor of a monied institution, which, holding itself responsible to none but its stockholders, entwining its poisonous folds around the interests and wants, the hopes and fears of the community, would prostrate every barrier which liberty hath set up—which would choke the popular voice, speaking through the legislative and executive magistracy of the nation—which would trammel the press—corrupt the purity of elections, and lay the whole country recreant at its feet. We have said that the gathering contest does not differ in character from that which resulted in the triumph of democratic principles, in the election of Jefferson, and their second triumph in the election of Jackson. We repeat it—it is a struggle between the two great opposing principles of democracy and aristocracy. It matters not what cognomen the leaders of party may assume. It is imagined, says Mr Grundy, that the name of 'Whig' will bring together parties and men who differ in all the political measures which have divided and still divide the people of the United States. Men who hold no political opinion in common—who are separated from each other as widely as the poles are—put on the cognomen or family name. Disguise it as you will, it is a conflict between the consolidation of power on one hand, and its limitation on the other. The ascendancy which the republican party have attained will be preserved. When the republican successor of General Jackson takes his investiture of office, he also takes the responsibility of maintaining the same leading principles, the same administrative policy, which was introduced under Jefferson, and continued under Andrew Jackson. Their measures will be his glory or reproach. It will be for him to perpetuate the principles which have so signally characterized this administration. It will be for him to make the great republican family the depository of these principles and policy, and to hold himself up as a mirror in which may be reflected the stern features of democracy.

The story published in the Gloucester Telegraph, about the Collector of that port, stating that he refused to allow the editor of the Telegraph to copy the shipping list from the books in his office, is false—the Collector only refused to copy the list himself, which he had before frequently done to oblige Mr Telegraph. The assertion that the Collector was paid for what he did is another falsehood, and this is the reason, probably, that it was so eagerly seized upon by the Atlas—nothing sets well upon its stomach except it be well seasoned with falsehood.

Some of the Bank papers seem to be very much elated at the fact that three ex-Governors were in attendance upon the Wig Convention in Augusta. If the managers of that concern had thought of it in season, they might have added Samuel Bell, of New Hampshire, to the number, which would have enabled them to drive four-in-hand, instead of what the jockeys call a gimblet-team.

An editor, who deprecates the employment of females as type-setters, and who thinks they had better be employed in making pudding than pi, attempts to throw a damper upon the custom, by persuading his friends never to choose a wife from a printing office. We are of opinion that the quickest way to get rid of them, is to marry them off, faster than they can learn the art.

A man and his wife were horribly burned in New York, on Saturday last, by the ignition of a quantity of Spirit Gas, with which the former was filling a burning lamp. They lived a day or two in great pain, when they died.

It was hot enough to roast a man alive, yesterday, in a great many places besides the furnace of a steamboat—should we hear of any poor fellow who was actually crisped we will issue an extra at 11 o'clock this morning.

The communication in the Bangor Republican concerning the Captain of the steamboat Bangor, referred to in yesterday's Post, related to the former, and not to the present Captain of that boat.

The Transcript cautions the public to beware of a community of pick-pockets in this city from the South, who are provided with a fine cutting edge of steel inserted in a ring, which is worn on the finger, with which they can cut a pocket very adroitly.

"A" is informed that we published a paragraph a few days since upon the subject to which he refers.

The "dialogue between a shoe maker and his customer," is hardly worth printing.

An Albany editor wishes a cotemporary "success, and a plenty of yellow boys."

POLICE COURT.

James Durant, who was scarcely able to stand, in consequence of the tremors, was charged with an assault on Elijah White, who found him asleep in the hay-loft of a stable, from which he rather unceremoniously ejected him by a push on the shoulder. When Durant got into the street he picked up a couple of brick-bats, and discharged one of them at White, hitting him a smart blow on the brow, by way of receipt for driving him out of his hay-roost. A second count of vagabondism was added, and it was proved that Durant was in the habit of peddling water for rum-traps, and taking his pay in two-centers.—5 months House of Correction.

Joseph Coglans, a desperate outlandish darkey, was arrested for an assault on Joseph Tavers, a watchman. Tavers hailed Coglans' comrade, and requested him to "douse his cigar." The request was complied with, but Coglans was of "opinion that a man had a right to do as he pleased in the king's street." Tavers replied, that "this was a free country than any of his majesty's dominions, but that there were some things that would not go down here, and that smoking in the streets was one of them, and saucy niggers another." C. took this for a challenge, and, handing his hat to a black boy, standing by, squared off for action; but, not understanding the tactics of the watch-book, was soon handsomely used up, without being able to inflict any great injury on Tavers, except a sharp bite on the thumb.—Fined $3.32 and costs.

Assaulting a female in the streets.—Isaac Wilkinson a young, well-looking man, was arrested on Monday night, for a most violent attack on a woman in Ann street. Without passing any words with her, she not being even aware of his proximity to her, he knocked her off from the side walk, and threw a shade pole after her. This is the third offence of this kind, of which he has been guilty, and he appears to entertain some unaccountable antipathy towards females, and acts from his impulses, when he meets them in the street, unprotected. He gave Constable Ellis a very severe kick when he arrested him.—5 months in the house of Correction.

Bruising blows hard.—James Maloy, John Doyle, and Patrick Kenney, were all embraced in one complaint, as neighbors, and dangerous and disorderly drunks. They all burrowed in the same den, got drunk every day, fought together every night, and became an insupportable riotous nuisance to the neighborhood. Maloy was sentenced to five months in the house of correction; Doyle, four months, and Kenney, three ditto.

The life and adventures of John Marston Hall. By the author of "Darnley, Richelieu, Henry Masterson, Mary of Burgundy, &c." N. York. Harper & Brothers. 2 vols. 1834. The author of these volumes ranks at least second, as the Novelist of the age; but his last labors are not second to any former ones. The reader must prepare his hair, if it be not "the dowry of a second head," to rise on end, as he travels through the thrilling interest of the "Adventures." All sorts of characters, and all kinds of events, "strut their hour upon the stage," but so highly interesting and impressive are their actions, that we carry them with us in our recollections through the whole drama. The style is a model of fine writing; the narration natural and forcible; the moral "adorns the tale," and Cupid crowns the conclusion.

"The Penitent's Tear," a ballad sung by Mrs Wood, the Poetry and Melody by Thomas Power, Esq., arranged for the Piano by Mr James G. Maeder, has lately been published in Philadelphia, and is for sale in this city. The music to this ballad has been pronounced by competent judges very sweet and appropriate, and no one will deny the beautiful and feeling simplicity of the poetry. Upon the subject of music we agree with a writer in the Knickerbocker, who says—

"I love music—melody—harmony: and I detest, equally with hundreds who profess to admire, that unnatural combination of trilling, quavering, shaking, which passes for all three of these attributes. Give me simple music, be it lively or sad. None of your delicate notes, split into hexagons, for me! The first tune which ever fell upon my ear, was good old Windham; and to this day, I would not exchange its solemn tones for all the inventions and improvements of modern sacred music."

The Works of Mrs. Sherwood (uniform edition) Vol. 3.—Harper & Brothers, 1834: with an engraved title page and plate.

Mrs Sherwood's name and talents are so familiar to young and old, that we hardly need pay them a passing compliment, lest it might be construed into a suspicious puff of protection and patronage. Her interesting volumes have long been the standard classics of the Nursery; and have not less met the approbation of the parent than won the young fancies of the child.

We dismiss the subject with a just tribute to the publishers, for their excellent taste in the style of the typography and binding, the latter—purple embossed cambric, gilt-lettered—is rich, neat, and elegant.

McGregor keeps a very good eating house at the old Stackpole Mansion. He will give a hungry man an excellent dinner for a small consideration—his larder is always well filled, which enables him to serve up a supper for a private party at short notice and in the best style—his wines are of the first quality, well cooled, and uncorked the moment his customer looks dry.

Municipal.—At a meeting of the Mayor and Alder men on Monday:

Wm. Andrews, J. M. Allen, Elias Bean, Seth E. Benson, Stephen Brown, Silas Field, Edward F. Hall, Daniel Hersey, T. B. Mackay, Loring Newcomb, and Frank Stratton, licensed as auctioneers, and their bonds approved.

The Superintendent of Public Lands made a report of sales made by him from April 6, to Aug. 2, amounting in the whole to $11,731.75, which was read and sent down.

We learn, says the New Bedford Gazette, that the new Custom House in this town, the foundation of which was laid last summer, is to be completed forthwith.—Contracts have been made, and the workmen are about to commence building. It is to be of brick—not of granite, as in the original plan.

Accident.—The Albany Daily Advertiser says the laboratory at Mr Cook's Castle Garden, where his fire works are manufactured, blew up yesterday morning. Several persons were wounded and one young lad is dangerously burnt.—N. Y. Gaz.

FOREIGN.

Five Days Later from England.—By the arrival of the packet ship Hibernia, Captain Wilson, we have our regular files of papers to the latest dates.—There does not appear to be a word of political news of moment, and seldom have our files been so barren.—N. Y. Gaz.

A battle had taken place near Pampeluna, between the Queen's troops and the insurgents, and the contest was a severe one, in which the Carlists suffered much.

The French papers of the 29th June, were destitute of interest. The Monitor announces the provisional treaty between France and New Grenada.

Don Miguel, with a suite of 150 persons, had arrived at Genoa.

The affairs of Turkey and Egypt remained unsettled. An Egyptian frigate had arrived at Constantinople about the 4th of June, with a million of piasters as a present from Mehemet Ali, but its effect was of a doubtful character.

The termination of the elections of France, in favor of the ministerialists, had produced some tumults, but ultimate good was anticipated. The French nation, it is said, dread the renewal of the influence of republicanism.

The British government has resolved to form a new settlement on the southern coast of Australia, near Spencer's Gulf, which contains a harbor, named Port Lincoln, of sufficient capacity to contain in its three coves all the navy of England.

Don Carlos, of Spain, family, and suite, had left Portsmouth for Gloucester Lodge, Brompton, which had been hired for their residence. His other attendants, 160 persons, had gone to Hamburg.

London, June 29.—The intelligence from Switzerland leaves little doubt of the intention of the Northern Powers to put into execution their coercive measures against Switzerland, unless the Federal Government will immediately give up the German refugees who took part in the affair of Frankfurt, and in general, of all proscribed persons who have sought an asylum in that country, with the view of exciting disturbance in Germany. The post is to be first stopped, and then the commercial intercourse.

Portsmouth, June 26.—Early this morning, the brig Betsey, from Lisbon, anchored at Spithead. She has on board 200 refugee Spanish officers, chiefly of rank. After holding a conference with some of Don Carlos's retinue, she put to sea, bound for Hamburg. Every preparation was made to fire a royal salute upon Don Carlos leaving for Brompton but he waived the honor; his two sons are still here, and it is said if his new quarters are not pleasant, he will return to this garrison.

Mr Sheridan Knowles, author of the Hunchback, and other popular pieces, was to sail for New York on the 24th July.

Mrs Caton, of Maryland, eldest daughter of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, has arrived in England, on a visit to her daughters, the Marchioness Wellesley and the Marchioness Carmarthen.

We perceive, by the last accounts from Montreal, that confidence had been again restored among the inhabitants, and the fears arising from Cholera nearly, if not wholly, overcome. The number of persons admitted into the Cholera hospital amounted, in all, to 75, of whom 43 died, 21 were discharged convalescent, and 11 remained. Among the early patients, were a number of poor emigrants, (men, women, and children,) who had been exposed on the wharf, we are informed, without food or the means of a subsistence, to a burning sun of a 120 or 125 degrees. This in itself, would be sufficient to create sickness and death; and the only matter of astonishment, although one of congratulation is that there had not been more fatal cases than the result appears to have shown.—N. Y. Times.

The Pittsburg Gazette of Monday says, "We understand, in consequence of the severe domestic affliction in his family, the Hon. William Wilkins has declined the office tendered to him by the Executive, and his relative, the Hon. H. Denny, has also declined a similar mark of respect and confidence, offered to him by his friends."

Shocking from Medway.—A correspondent in Medway, under yesterday's date, writes thus:—"On Saturday afternoon last, two young lads who had been hunting, accidentally called for water at the door of a small house in the easterly part of this town, occupied by a loathsome drunkard and his unfortunate wife, and found the wretched man dead on the floor, with his throat cut in a most hideous manner, and his wife sleeping in apparent quietude on a bed in the same room. In our acquaintance with the miseries and the frailties of human life, we have never witnessed a sight like that which is here presented. The poor husband, with the blood still gushing from the ghastly wound in his throat, and from his mouth and nose, lying silently on his gory bed; the benumbed and indifferent appearance of the wife, who was afterwards found to have received a severe wound on the head, together with the destitute and comfortless appearance of the interior of the house, presented one of the most revolting spectacles that can be imagined."—Boston Adv.

Milking Whales.—The N. Y. Commercial has an article on Whale cheese, in which the sayings of Dr Mitchell, Dr Jenner, Chauvelin and Baron Cuvier are quoted to show, among other things, that Whale's milk is richer than that of a cow, and consequently, more nutritious. The subjoined interrogatory and recommendation are from the article in review:—N. Bedford Gaz.

"Instead of wielding the harpoon with such murderous dexterity would it not be advisable for our Nantucket and New Bedford whalersmen to establish a whale pasture in the Vineyard sound, and turn their attention from extracting oil to the making of whale cheese?" "Instead of taking them by the harpoon we would recommend to our friends 'down east,' to throw a noose over them as the South American hunters throw the lasso over the wild bulls and horses."

Singular Attachment.—An old gentleman, Mr. Staveley, now living at Clifton, near this city, is at present an object of great interest, on account of the very singular companion by whom he is almost invariably accompanied, viz, a gander, belonging to Mr Cross, a farmer, residing in that township. The bird, every morning about five o'clock, comes from its own domicile near the Marquee, to Mr Staveley's residence, and by its cackling noise calls the old gentleman up. It then accompanies him in all his rambles during the day, and is frequently to be seen in our busy streets, and with crowds of children by whom the pair are often accompanied. When Mr Staveley sits down to rest himself, which he is frequently obliged to do, from his age and infirmities, the gander immediately sits down at his feet. There are several places at which the old gentleman has been in the habit of resting; and now just before he arrives at them, his feathered companion starts off, and arrives at the spot a little before Mr S., it turns round, and by a flap of its wings, and a cackling noise, intimates that they have arrived at their place. If any one molests the old gentleman, the gander chatters at, and bites them, if possible. If he goes in a public house, it enters also, if permitted, and stands behind him while he drinks his glass of ale; sometimes partaking of the refreshing beverage. If not permitted to enter the house, it remains at the door till Mr Staveley comes out. Altogether this circumstance forms one of the most surprising traits in the natural history of the goose, with which we are acquainted.—Yorkshire Gazette.

Robbery.—Isaac Brooks, a drover, from Stow, had his pocket book stolen from his pocket yesterday, at the Brighton Market, containing money to the amount of about $500, and notes to the amount of $1500, with other valuable papers. A reward of $100 is offered for the rogue.—Tyans.

A good story, well related.—Sampson in the lap of Delilah.—Every body knows how the strong man was caught napping in the lap of the beauty, and lost his long locks and bright eyes, and finally lay under the ruins of a Philistine temple. It was a warning to all in after time, to keep out of dangerous places, and never to sleep in the lap of a siren. But "nemo omnibus horis sapit," that is to say, "no one is wise in an Omnibus, or among the ladies." We have a striking instance of this in the case of a brother editor, as clever a fellow as ever handled the scissors or the ink-ball. He is a Jackson man to the back-bone—but he gives an account of his adventures on the Glorious Fourth, which proves that patriots, as well as Sampsons, may slumber where they should not. On that day he was at Portsmouth, where each party had its procession, his oration, its beef and its wine. In the honesty of his heart, he gives an account of what he "saw, heard, and thought," upon that occasion. He informs his readers that the Jackson procession was "as long as from the beginning to the end of it, composed of a cavalry of truckmen, two companies of artillery, and an uncounted number of good looking men, who bore the marks of health, temperance, industry and hard work;"—that the Jackson orator "was a good looking man;"—the truckmen "presented a highly respectable appearance;"—and the citizens who followed were "the bone and muscle, the real workies of the town." The other procession, he says, was composed of men whose "principles could be learnt by their outward appearances. The toss of their heads—the sneer upon their countenances, and their very step, said to their opponents, as plain as tongue could utter, stand back, I am better than thou." The orations, too, were characteristic. The Jackson oration is "well spoken of;" and the mouth piece of the Whigs "reviled the President and his Cabinet;" and we are assured that "of those who cheered him, he that made the most noise was the greatest fool." Now, gentle reader, in which of these processions do you suppose our worthy brother of the type was found? and to which of the orations did he lend his ear? Tell it not in Dover! publish it not in the streets at Portsmouth! The Jackson Sampson slumbered in the lap of a Whig Delilah, and awoke to hear an Amalekite abuse the leader of the faithful.—"Tis true 'tis pity, pity 'tis true," this republican turned his back upon the bone and muscle, and was found among those who wore a sneer, and tossed their heads, and reviled the President! And only hear his apology. "The reason why we will not give, for we do not talk of the influence that the fairer part of creation exercise over us." If such an excuse can be received in a caucus, or at Washington, for such an offence, we are no judge of pork. The editor must be put on his probation—and not only atone for his own offences, but must labor hard to obtain the ascendancy over the Delilah who has led him astray. If he once gets her fairly under Locke and key, let her look out for the consequences. The least she can expect, by way of punishment, is to hear a dozen hickory orations in a year, and read all the editorials of her Sampson.—Exeter News Letter.

The Dutch Wagoner and the Irish Carter.—A Dutchman, with a Pennsylvania wagon and a strong team, yesterday, met an Irish carter in Nassau street, opposite Dr Spring's church, where the way is so cumbered up with piles of brick and other building materials that it is impossible for two teams to pass each other. The Dutchman being rather heavily laden, and his wagon unwieldy, thought it belonged to the "Irishman to back out; while the latter, having "only a bit of a small cart jist, and but one single horse foremost that," thought the Dutchman, on his part, should give way.—So there they were, directly at odds.

"Wal, Mishter Garter," said the wagoner, "here pe's we, shunck enough, petwixt de prickis, and de timper, and all de resht of de tampt ruppish, wat lumpers up dish keart whiternish of a city." "Faith, sir, and you're right, and so you would be if you was hanged jist. But you're all in the wrong, inirely, to take up both sides of the shtrate wid your big lumberin' wagon, as you do. Pray, be after turnin' out, wim yo?"

"You vool you!—don't you zee mit an eye, plindt as you pe, dat de roadt ish all plockt up?"

"Sae it! To be sure I do, and so might any other jintleman that hadn't an eye in his head. But that's no reason why you shouldn't turn out, no how."

"No reason! Wy, you plunderin' tog you, how gan I durn out, offer all dish tampt ruppish here so high as de top of de meetin'-house, all put? You pack out, your own self, and not droppule me."

"I'll not do it, then."

"Wal, yust as you gan affort, Mishter Garter. Vor mine hart, I pe's in no hurry. So I'll yust pate mine horses, wile you kets reatty to pack out." The Dutchman then very leisurely hung a basket of provender on the head of each of his horses; and, lighting his pipe with a flint and steel, sat down to wait for the backing out of the Irishman.

This quite upset the philosophy of the carter. His Irish mercuriality couldn't wait for the moving of the Dutch plegin; and his team was too weak to venture upon running a tilt against that of his antagonist. The police, too, might presently be along; wherefore, he concluded it would be "the chapest way, besides being the shortest in the long run," to back out, and leave the victory to the Dutchman.—N. Y. Trans.

Attempt at Highway Robbery.—Last night, between the hours of ten and eleven o'clock, as Mr Adams, intending to pass Warren Bridge on foot, approached it within a few rods, near the blacksmith's shop, he was attacked by three men, armed with clubs, who knocked him down, and demanded his money. He cried "murder," and called for help, but before the scoundrels robbed him, they suddenly left him, and ran across the canal bridge to Causeway street, alarmed, as Mr Adams thinks, by somebody's approach. Mr A. on mentioning the assault to a toll gather, and describing as accurately as he could the persons who attacked him, was informed by him that they had crossed the bridge from Charlestown about nine o'clock, and paid their toll. Mr Adams was so much injured that he was unable to proceed to Medford as he intended.—Trans.

Mr Burden's Boat.—We are sorry to learn, says the Albany Evening Journal, that the injury to Mr Burden's steamboat is more serious than we supposed yesterday. Both cylinders are entirely destroyed. The loss, we understand, will not fall below $25,000.

At some of the opposition ward meetings, recently held in the city of New York, it has been resolved, that they "disclaim all connexion with the United States Bank."

BY THE STEAMBOAT MAIL.

Health of the City.—We learn at the Inspector's Office that the number of deaths in this city during the week ending Saturday morning, 8 o'clock, is between 240 and 250; being a greater number than has occurred in one week since 1832.

There is, however, nothing alarming in this unusual number; as it includes the many individuals who died on Saturday and Sunday, July 26th and 27th, from excessive heat and drinking cold water,—while of the rest, more than 130 are under two years of age. A few died of common Cholera Morbus, but none of Asiatic Cholera.

The sudden death of Wm. Lawson, Inspector of the 1st Ward, who was attacked at 11 o'clock Sunday forenoon, and died in 8 hours, exhibiting some of the symptoms of Asiatic Cholera, has given rise to considerable conversation, and perhaps a little alarm.

The general feeling, however, among intelligent men, appears to be, that even admitting a few cases of this disease should occur, it would be nothing very extraordinary, or very alarming. In almost all the large cities of Europe, where the Cholera raged in 1831-2, there have since been, at intervals, a number of scattered cases,—but in none of them has it prevailed as an epidemic. There is no reason, that we know of, why New York should be an exception to the general rule.—N. York Journal, Com. of Monday.
